This is an astonishing and incredible age.

Astonishingly trivial and incredibly bold.

It is not easy to be a part of such times. If you don't think so, try to be.

You will find our sense of direction confused, our pace exhaustingly swift, our reasons obscure and contradictory and the world taken over by Wise Men.

You will find these Wise Men remote and unintelligible. They think a good deal, of course. But not about us, as former Wise Men used to do.

The current Wise Men think about Mankind, whatever that is. They think about blowing it up, sending it to the moon, or reducing it to mathematical equations which fit into a computor without being turned sideways.

But they never say why. Perhaps the only reason they could give, if pressed, is that they want to see what would happen.

That's an innocent kind of curiosity. It's the sort of an answer that children give when caught trying tin cans to a puppy's tail, or placing logs on the rails just as the Super Chief is due to pass through.

I remember reading about a fellow who pointed a gun at his girl friend and pulled the trigger. He told the jury that there was no malice aforethought: he just wanted to see what would happen. Charmed by this thirst for knowledge, they let him off with a justifiable homicide rap. It's an attitude which takes some getting used to.

And so does the curiosity of the Wise Men. They do not seem to be very curious about what to do with whatever happens, just so long as it happens. And they seem unrestrained by the sort of modesty which prevents most of us from running naked in the streets or singing a chorus of Melancholy Baby at the Bach Festival, just to see what would happen.

If, before starting out in one of their hot pursuits, they assumed less about Mankind and asked more of men, they might bend their mischievious curiosity to something more useful whose consequences are just as unpredictable, if finding out what happens is of such unending joy to them.

Why not, for instance, evolve a frozen TV breakfast? Civilized man—as distinguished from Mankind—is confronted each morning with the sleeping and disrespectful wife, and no breakfast.

How sublime life would be if a complete breakfast, in a divided aluminum plate, consisting of frozen fried eggs, frozen toast, frozen bacon, frozen jam, frozen coffee and frozen breakfast conversation could be popped into an automatic oven the night before.

Just before retiring, a series of switches could be set to predetermined times and functions. At the selected hour, everything would commence automatically. The toothbrush would start to whir, the automatic shoe buffer would spin, the electric razor would snarl angrily, the oven would turn on and the television would light up

Storm Trumpets Sound Retreat In Evening's Sky

Z-Z-Z-z-z-z-z-z....

There is an old, familiar song entitled "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise." Last night, one would have assumed that the City Council was also.

Any other explanation for the tedious and exhausting proceedings which adjourned at 12:30 a.m. would be not only less romantic, it would be disloyal. The Council, exhibiting an unmistakable passion for apathy, had it expressed in so many words by Councilman Herbert Blanks, who said at one point in the proceedings, "I don't want to be rushed." It was the non sequitur of the age.

Blanks, the innocent and inadvertent spokesman for something a lot bigger than any one man on the Council, was talking at the time about the gas station overlay zone ordinance sent up from the Planning Commission. August Nieto, speaking for the Shell Oil Company because of a deal involving the firm in which he is interested, pled gently for some definitive action at this time, in order that the Company might know how to proceed. An interim report by Mayor Eben Whittlesey, proposing that the Council approve in principal the idea of an overlay zone as a solution to extensive non-conformity among service stations—without proceeding so far as to approve the ordinance in present form—elicited Blanks' protest against being rushed.

No clock, not even a current calendar, could measure how giddily the matter has careened along. It arose in September of 1962, nearly six months ago, and since December of that year, the precise ordinance proposed by the Commission has been a matter of public record.

Blanks, after insisting that the matter be delayed for study until the March meeting, almost immediately thereafter advised the chair that he wouldn't be present at that meeting. As if he were not nonplussed by such ingenuousness, Whittlesey obtained concurrence for a special meeting on 20 February, at 8:00 p.m., to give further unrushed consideration of the matter.

All, however, is not whimsy. Shell, and other service station interests, are well aware that they could proceed with reconstruction programs of no particular benefit to the city, which expiring options may well compel them to do. Their forebearance, to see what the cumbersome processes of government may eventually allow, may be stretched beyond the point of academic curiosity. If so, the Council will have all the time in the world.

BIG STORM EXPIRES IN WELTER OF DEBRIS AND HEROIC FEATS

One of the worst storms in many a year has gone growling and grumbling off into history, dragging behind it in tatters a scandalous record of destruction.

Trees were toppled in profusion; the best estimates soar into the hundreds. Power failures and communication interruptions were general and frequent. But, strangely enough, relatively little private property damage was inflicted — although, where it did occur, it was grave, perhaps as much as $5,000 on two houses smashed by falling trees.

In the city, the Street Department's hard-pressed and resourceful crews fought the wreckage of the storm's onslaught almost without pause for three days. "Mostly it was the falling trees which gave us the trouble," says Street Superintendent William Askew. With climbers on hand, power saws and brush choppers, the Department moved into action wherever threat to private property, power and communications occurred, or roads were blocked. And Hugh Smith, a private tree surgeon, moved his crews as swiftly.

Smith himself performed one of the most audacious acts of the whole episode. In the middle of the wild and wet night a fifty-foot pine tore loose from its root bed and began to lean threateningly over the Stackpole residence at Camino Real and Ocean. While police blocked off the streets and shone spotlights up into the clamorous darkness, Smith, with a rope around his waist, scurried up the groaning and perilously thrashing tree, and made fast the line near the top, while the other end was affixed to a truck. With the tree thus arrested in its threat to the house, Smith returned to the top once again, gingerly commencing a topping operation to take down the weight and height.

The home of volunteer fireman Russell Pratt was possibly saved from floating away down Carmel River when his fellow volunteers answered a call from Mrs. Pratt. The river had flowed over the dike, inundated his pump house and was lapping heavily at the house foundation until it was sandbagged above the water level.

The Police Department operated by walkie-talkie when electricity failed, but fortunately, except for lending all possible helping hands, police business was quiet—but wet.

Plumbers and the Health Department had no trouble as in the storm of five years ago when wells were contaminated, drains stopped up and septic tanks overflowed.

Jim Burgess and his California State Auto Association service trucks "had about the normal

Tree Time

No law preventing the removal of trees on private property is going to be enacted. Frowned on Tuesday by the Forestry Commission, the proposal to require permits to remove trees on private lands was sent to outer darkness last night by the City Council, which failed (2-2) to pass a report by committee (Blanks, Buffington) not to enact such an ordinance—which is precisely what the obtuse stand-off accomplished.

Still in favor of some type of regulation, Mayor Eben Whittlesey and Councilman Frank Putnam nevertheless were not numerically superior, and the matter appears dead for the moment. A substitute, which did get through on motion of Putnam, promotes a tree give-away on the 9 March, in recognition of Arbor Day. (If you can't outnumber them, outbreed them.)

And The Trains Came

The SP may be giving up its passenger train service to Monterey, but City Engineer Clayton Neill suspects that the "Pennsy" is bound for Carmel. Commenting on the offensive, unsightly and inexplicable conglomeration of signs, posts, lights and zebra stripes at the intersection of Carpenter Street extension and Highway One, which the County is presently proposing to landscape around, Neill said at last night's City Council meeting: "It looks up there like the place where the Pennsylvania Railroad dives under the Hudson River. Landscaping is fine, as far as it goes, but it isn't getting at the real problems of all of those metal tombstones."

SAINTS

Serra Medal

Congressman Burt Talcott and Senator Thomas Kuchel today introduced bills in the House and Senate authorizing the Treasury Department to strike commemorative medals in honor of the 250th Anniversary of the birth of Father Junipero Serra on 24 November.

The bill authorizes the use of U. S. Mint facilities to make the coins, but cost of production will be borne by the Padre Junipero Serra 250th Anniversary Association.

Talcott said he was "pleased to introduce the bill since seven of the missions are in my Congressional District. All California citizens will want to join in the observance of this event".

SCHOOLS

Tax Committee

Colonel Shelburn Robison (USA ret.) has been named Chairman of the Get-Out-the-Vote committee for the Carmel School election. The election for the continuance of the fifty-cent over-ride tax now in effect will be on Tuesday, 19 February.

Committee members include Mrs. Everett Banfield, Jr., Mrs. George Yates, Mrs. Sidney Williams, Mrs. Louis Gardner, Mrs. R. W. Bell, Mrs. F. K. Duhring, Mrs. Walter Purde, Mrs. George G. Purvis, Mrs. Robert E. Newton and John Martin.

Candidate

James Nielsen, 37, an attorney with offices on Ocean Avenue near Dolores, Monday filed his papers as a candidate for one of the three seats on the Board of Education which will be subject to election in April.

Nielsen is a graduate of Pomona College and the University of San Francisco Law School. He did graduate work at the University of London, subsequent to which he went into private practice with his father in Fresno. He has lived in Carmel Valley for approximately two years with his wife, Dorothy, and their two children, Robin, 5, and Peter, 7. The children attend Carmelo School.

Filing for the election closes 1 March. Two other candidates are in the field, incumbent Mrs. Herbert B. Blanks and civil engineer Steven Sassoon.

BUSINESS

Table d'Hote

Why do gourmets run to San Francisco, when paradise is at our gates? For instance, where in San Francisco (on Monday, at least) could you have walked in and said, "Give me a wild boar sandwich?"

Actually, you could have walked in anywhere and said it. But only in Carmel would you have been served.

At Howard Baxter's Village Pub, on Dolores, wild boar sandwiches were being served. Howard had shot the boar (not the bull) in Carmel Valley. It was delicious.

PEOPLE

Number, Please

Leo Tanous reports that several times each month he has been receiving calls in his office from Seattle, Washington. A check reveals that his Ocean Avenue Realty phone number is close to that of the Bon Marche, one of Seattle's leading department stores, and digital dialing is, geographically speaking, myopic.

At such times, Leo's business becomes curiously complicated, with requests for 90-day options on girdles, dining tables with a view, or a pair of slippers, 40 x 100.

Street Seen

A girl by the name of Barbara nosed her station wagon into the curb at Ocean and Lincoln, across the street from the library, leaving the rear end of the car thrust out into the street.

As she opened the door to get out, her arms loaded with books, police Officer Eddie Fischer zeroed in on his three-wheeler. He gestured at the rear of the wagon sticking out into traffic, and said something that couldn't be heard above the sounds of passing cars and the squirrels chattering down from the pine tree above.

Barbara looked back, down at her arm-full of books, then smiled at Fischer with sweet helplessness. Fischer gunned his motorcycle engine nervously; but he was too late.

She opened the door and dropped the books in his arms. Gallant, disciplined and proud of the Department's prestige, which was obviously being challenged, Fischer took prompt and resourceful action. He swung the bike across the street, dropped the books in the curbside deposit bin, and went puttering away up Lincoln, swinging his chalk along the rows of tires like a happy kid rattling a stick along fence pickets on his way home from school.

"Standard emergency procedure," snorts Chief Clyde Klaumann. "Every time I park at Dolores and Ocean by the mail box to watch the traffic situation in the intersection, somebody pulls alongside and asks if I would mind dropping their mail in the box for them."

He does.

When constabularly duty's to be done, to be done, A policeman's life is quite a 'appy one. ('appy one.)

THEATRE

"Fallen Angels"

Carmel's Studio Restaurant and Theatre opens its second dinner-theatre presentation tomorrow with Noel Coward's "Fallen Angels."

The production, under the direction of Charles Thomas, will star Betty Fowlston and Ruth McElroy in the title roles. Miss Fowlston last appeared at The Studio in Jerry De Bono's comedy, "The Psyche of Diane O'Day," Miss McElroy will make a unique return to The Studio stage. Under the Denny-Watrous management, she appeared in the original production of "The Drunkard" presented on the same stage, later moving to Los Angeles for its record breaking run.

Portraying the husbands of the "Fallen Angels" are Clifford Anderson, last seen at The Studio in the musical, "Leave it to Jane," and Dan Coleman, who will be making his debut at The Studio.

Virginia Beattie, who appeared in Agatha Christie's "The Mousetrap" at The Studio, has been cast in the choice role of Saunders, Coward's favorite kind of maid who has been everywhere and done everything.

The part of Maurice, a very charming and very French friend of the leading ladies, will be played by Bertrand d'Avenas.

The production's scenic design and decor has been furnished by Ruth Jorden Allan and director Thomas.

The dinner-theatre presentation of "Fallen Angels" will play Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings. Dinner-time is 6:30 to 7:30. Show-time: 8:30.

WHERE THERE'S LIFE

By Andre Hope

Have you ever had those times when you wished you hadn't? I did, last week.

I was just brimming with good advice. "Prune your roses now!" I cried. Delicious storm, wasn't it? The day after I wrote that, the only way you could prune anything was to stand on the roof with the shears and snap at the bushes as they blew past. There was a suggestion that this was also a good time to get rid of all the doo-daddery that had accumulated around the house. This did prove to be true. To date, I understand, it has started several family brannigans. She took it out the back door; he trotted it in the front door; all of his pet gumm-thingies were being orphaned "and someday he's going to use them!" Imagine what would happen if this were a "Dear Whoever" column; love would be lorn and lost, Valentines would be sent postage-due and domestic chaos would reign.....

Seems an appropriate time to celebrate my 26th anniversary at the typewriter. In those days things were different—much worse. The first paper was in Laguna Beach, California. As I remember, I told the editor he needed me and he said, "Prove it!" Twenty-six years later I said approximately the same thing to my present boss and he gave me the same general answer. In between I don't believe I ever have proven it, but it's been such fun trying. Since that first column, I've written for radio, TV, and have taken a swat at the cinema (it swatted back). I even wrote a few plays which got the most interesting reviews. Nobody understood 'em. That was all right with me; why should I care? I couldn't understand them either. I don't think it was so much the content as it was the spelling, grammar and punctuation. The actors just called it as they saw it.

The publicity business had its high spots, too. Some of them high enough to be positively gamey. For instance, I made a lifelong friend of an African lion, male—teeth and claws intact, capable of breaking a water buffalo's back with one swipe of the paw. Now that I think of it I am glad we were friends. We invented stunts for a skunk named Shalimar, monkeys, talking birds, a waltzing bear who ocassionally liked to sit one out—on anyone who was handy. Once tried to explain a complicated routine for which the circus had sent me five clowns, sight unseen. No two spoke the same language and none spoke English. So I had to go on with them as the sixth clown; a fellow I later named Mr. Poo. My alter ego, Poo, has been with me ever since. A very handy fellow to have around when the going gets sticky.

Once did a quiz show with Marvin Miller (Of "The Millionaire") and Jack Bailey ("Queen for a Day"). While contestants were trying to answer questions, we put apples on their heads and stood around with bows and arrows; gave them time limits and stood them in rapidly drying plaster of Paris. If they answered correctly, they were lucky to escape with their sanity and a small prize. If wrong, they were put in a cage where they reappeared from week to week until some kindly soul volunteered to set them free. Most satisfying quiz show I have ever known.....

So, next week back to homes, gardens and gastronomy. Well, where there's life—?

To Meet Clarks and Dixons

Dr. and Mrs. Scott A. Heath have asked 60 friends to cocktails at their home in Rancho Rio Vista tomorrow evening to meet Mr. and Mrs. Arch Clark, formerly of Portland, Oregon, now Carmel residents; and Dr. and Mrs. Henry Dixon, visiting here from Portland.

Among The Pines

Trips To Tahoe

Mr. and Mrs. August Nieto joined their daughter, Katherine, and son-in-law, Bill McCormick, now of San Jose (Bill attends San Jose State College), and drove to Tahoe and Reno over the week end before the storm. Bill treated the group to dinner and a night's lodging, the pay-off on a golfing bet with Augie.

Driving conditions were better for this foursome than for Dr. and Mrs. William H. Trimble, who motored to Tahoe on Tuesday, after attending the University of California Dental School alumni meetings in San Francisco. On their way up Echo Summit they were greeted by the first snowfall of the season in the Sierras ("A beautiful sight," says Mrs. Trimble), which late that evening turned to dismaying rain. In the following two days 14 inches of rain was recorded at State Line where the Trimbles were staying. Skiers who had arrived hopefully for a day's snow were marooned; trucks and busses were rerouted from the Donner route to the Echo Summit route, until it, too, was closed and they were stranded along with the skiers in the State Line area. The Trimbles report seeing six Greyhound bus drivers lined up at a phone booth; the lake front was flooded and Highway 40 closed.

On the return trip over Echo Summit (at the end of the week the highway was sufficiently cleared for travel) there was one-way controlled traffic a good deal of the way, uncomfortable glimpses of a badly undermined road-bed, and the continual threat of falling rocks and boulders. (One car was hit, but not badly.)

"An exciting trip," the Trimbles conclude.

Birthday Surprise

Cocktails at the Lloyd Weers' on Sunday evening, followed by a dinner at the Mission Ranch, surprised Ernie Morehouse on the occasion of his seventieth birthday.

Well-wishers included Mrs. Morehouse, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Fehring, Mr. and Mrs. August Nieto, and Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Cook.

Lloyds Home Again

Bringing some south-of-the-border weather with them, Frank and Marjory Lloyd, with their daughter, Mardi, returned last week to Carmel from Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, where they have been vacationing for two months.

Mrs. Lloyd and Mardi left Vallarta by plane, and visited Guadalajara before meeting Frank, who had by preference driven a friend's car over the rough jungle road through the mountains from the coast. They then picked up their own car in Mazatlan, and arrived home at the end of Carmel's big storm.

"It was terribly hard to tear ourselves away—especially while we were circling over the bay and beaches after the plane took off; but it's good to be back," says Marjory.

Oh, Flower of Mine, weary with tears
Who dreams in the arms of the Sun.
Dreaming and waiting that aureate time
When your sea-love's travel is done.

On this Island of Love where she weeps with desire, this lambent virgin lucent as gold: will arise from the couch as
The ghost from the pyre, as the bells
On the headlands are tolled.

As the night sea doth take, oh Flower of Mine,
So the dawn sea doth cast on the shore; weep
Weep forever, dear Flower of Mine, loving Forevermore.

Tennis

The fabled center court at Wimbledon is geographically remote from John Gardiner's Tennis Ranch in Carmel Valley. Along the remorseless route of competition it may be reached these days most quickly via Australia.

In the days of Tilden, Budge, Kramer and Gonzales such a statement would have been not only heretical, it would have been absurd. American tennis rackets then dominated the tennis world, and seemed destined to continue doing so. But somewhere something went wrong, and this nation of 180,000,000 people today suffers the indignity of not being able even to win the zones matches for the Davis Cup, the symbol of world tennis from which we now drink some bitter dregs.

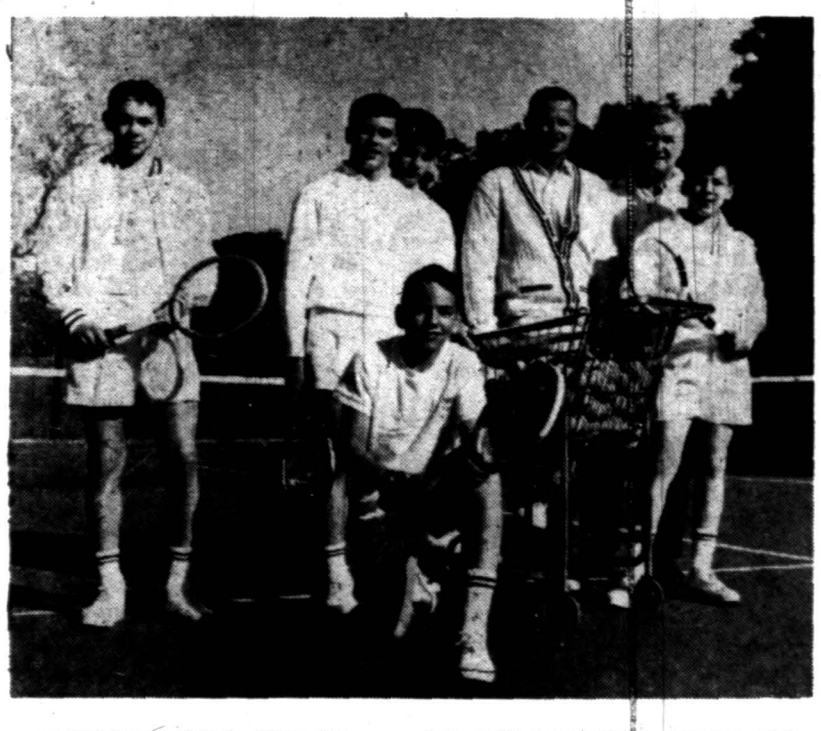

The day may once again return when the cup runneth over for us. If it does, it could be because of an unusual development program undertaken by five noted professionals under the style and name of Professional Tennis, Incorporated, organized by Gardiner, Tom Stow, Dick Stevens, Fred Earle and Chet Murphy.

After investigating published studies relating to the prediction of athletic ability, the group selected four tests designed to measure components of general motor capacity and, more specifically, potential tennis ability. At Carmel Junior High, and at other schools in northern California, the tests were applied to all likely students, and the five most promising were selected for an intensive three months' coaching program which will culminate when all of the participants are brought together this spring for a two-day tournament at Gardiner's Tennis Ranch. A panel of professionals and tennis officials will attend and select eight boys out of the seventy now being coached, to continue their training under the organization.

"We must sell the athletes the game of tennis," Gardiner says. "Their future in tennis will repay them as well as any other sport. We have one boy in the program who hit four grand slam home runs in Little League baseball. I would like to see him in the World Series, but I'd much rather watch him represent the United States in Davis Cup competition."

Sporting goods manufacturers (Wilson Company and Converse Rubber Company) have donated all of the clothing and equipment for the neophytes and many tennis enthusiasts have contributed funds to help accelerate the talent search program.

While Carmel Junior High was the only school in Monterey County selected this year, the program will go forward annually, and students at other schools in the area may eventually be tested in the dedicated hunt for a blazing racket to bust loose the formidable grip the Aussies have on world tennis supremacy.

ANYBODY FOR TENNIS — AT WIMBLEDON, THAT IS?

Basketball

The Carmel Padrebabes upset the undefeated Live Oak Lightweights Friday evening by the score of 49-41, while the Junior Varsity won over Robert Louis Stevenson 46-33. The Varsity lost 53-40.

Puting together their best game of the year, the Padrebabes led all the way. The even scoring of Rich DiLorenzo (17), Ed Brown (10), Pete Braudrick (9), and Davin Risdon (8), plus Jay Lang's superb ball-handling and 6 points showed that Carmel has a team to be reckoned with in the league. The hustle and rebounding of Davin Risdon and Ed Brown completely out-classed the speedy Live Oak Lightweights. The Carmel Lightweights now have three straight wins to their credit.

The Junior Varsity with Al Nishimura scoring 14 and Bob Moffatt scoring 12 showed Robert Louis Stevenson some of the finer points about the game of basketball. Sophmores Steve Trapkus and Rod Sibley looked exceptionally well as they continually grabbed rebounds, while George Buck's passing and floor game showed great promise.

The Carmel Varsity had great difficulty getting the second shot as the Acorns controlled the backboards. Rusty McCarthy played his best ball game of the year. His hustle and ball-hawking was one bright spot for Carmel.

A DOG IS LOYAL, OBEDIENT AND INCRIMINATING

A 29-year-old Belmont resident was arrested recently for taking a pheasant out of season, and was subsequently fined $50 in the Williams Judicial Court.

The man claimed he was training his dog, and was not hunting on the new Delevan National Wildlife Refuge, where he was apprehended. But when Warden Richard Laursen of Colusa started to drive away, the man's dog appeared from behind a rice check, carrying a pheasant in its mouth.

As Warden Laursen was writing out the citation, he heard the man remark to his hunting companion, "Take 'stupid' back to the car with you."

Sports Cars

BY ED LESLIE

I remember old Carmel after the first windy storm of the year. Up in Carmel Woods the dirt streets were covered with needles and the water ran along, giving a truly beautiful impression to anyone who liked the forest. It was a time, when we were teenagers, to go coast the old Model "A" or "T" down the hill to start it, collect enough friends to buy a gallon of gas, and go looking for some challenging roads, hills, or unusual places to putter around in the car. We'd try any road, and there generally were enough of us to tug the car out of the mud or the ditch when we slipped off.

Palou ran north off Monte Verde, then suddenly dropped off down the bank on to Second Street. It was slippery granite over adobe; we could seldom even get halfway up, but we tried. The old Dolores gulch had only been cut through from up by our house to Fourth Street, and Bill and Chub Askew were gradually filling up the dip with any and all dirt available. This made a sharp levelling-off bump at the bottom which, as I remember, used to nearly collapse Fred McIndoe's old Pontiac when we hit it at full speed.

We could drive all around the open land up atop Carmel Woods, and the corners coming down San Juan were nice and slippery. From the early days of coasting wagons and bikes, the two big 180-degree turns on Pescadero Road were fun to corner. There was never any traffic, except perhaps Mr. Roscelli, passing by in his garbage truck, looking for the good mushrooms that always grew down there.

We had a little trail from Pescadero where it was just possible to drive down, but not up. We used that trail for years to go down to pick pine cones to sell, or blackberries from the fence by the 17-Mile-Drive. We had a place to cross on to the Drive, and I'll bet Del Monte Properties' records were off sometimes, as we never entered the gates, but often drove out through them.

Driving down to what is now Mission Fields we all tried to see if we could ford the deeper spots that were flooded after every rain (the line is about where Mark Raggett once built). On toward the mouth of the River, at about Andy Wiemann's present house, is where we'd launch canvas boats to paddle around the tules, until either the steelhead snaggers or the artichoke people gave in and shoveled out the sand bar, letting out the backed-up water.

Back in the car we'd head for the River bridge, take a big run at the edge of the plowed field north of the highway and try to slosh through on to the dirt road that ran up the north side of the river. Generally it took a tow to get out of that mire, and off we'd go to Hatton Fields Mesa. The Mesa was flat grassland with the streets in, but no houses. You could mush around in circles or out across the flats to your heart's content. There was a favorite hill-climb for us on the Mesa. It started across the street from the Trevvetts' home at the end of Martin Place and ran straight up the bank for a long block to Hatton Road, close by the entrance to the Flanders' estate. I knew every bump and hole on the hill from riding my bike down it daily on my Herald (pardon the word) route. I don't believe I ever did make it up that road.

Today I look back and think of all the fun we had in old stripped-down chassis of Overlands, Chevvies, Fords, etc. and wonder how we stayed out of trouble while engaging in the hobby of Motoring. I do know that all of us in that generation had a healthy respect for Chief Roy Fraties' police officers, Earl Wermuth, Les Overhulse and Stoney Hay (with his big Buick). They kept us inactive inside the city limits. They were definitely interested in our problems, too, and would talk long hours with us in the patrol car parked at Dolores and Ocean. However, no foolishness was allowed when we were driving, and it certainly seemed that no matter what we had in mind or tried to do in Carmel, somehow Earl Wermuth would show up, as if by magic, and straighten us out! Later on when the V8 Fords began to be the rage, it was possible to get a traffic ticket for speeding, and we all knew that Judge Ross was quite firm, to say the least. Probably the older residents of those days never knew just how fine a job Wermuth and the others did to keep Carmel as calm as it was. We even had the local highway patrolman, Leonard Williams, talk with us about some way to burn off a little energy without using the streets and highways. He was all for improving Monterey's harbor facilities, way back then, in order to encourage motor boating for young people. He also patrolled the River bridge rather often!

I'm very glad that today a youth with cars and driving on his mind can start with powered model cars and planes, ride 15-speed racing bikes, build and drive Go-Karts, attend safety lectures and fun events with the Sports Car Club, and talk with others of like mind at controlled and sanctioned drag strips. He can get active participation in flying and boating with the CAP and Scouts. He can attend good clean motor sports events like the hardtops, Laguna Seca and the PBSCC gymkhanas and rallies. When old enough, he can even go to the Racing Driver's Club for lectures, and actual racing instruction and practice. Maybe Carmel isn't what it used to be, maybe I don't like the changes, but I do admit there are advantages for young people that didn't exist then. Right?

Southwind Heads South

It does not take long in this modern world for a record to be equalled or an act to be matched. The 45-foot ketch Neophyte put out from Sausalito with a four-girl crew under command of a single male. They made it to Hawaii more or less happily.

The 45-foot schooner Southwind has just arrived in San Diego after dropping her hook overnight at Stillwater Cove. The Southwind, pausing for re-fitting at the Silvergate Yacht Club, San Diego, before heading for charter work in the Carribbean, is crewed by four men and a girl. The girl, Janie O'Dell, promises to keep us informed.

AIR TIME

At 7:30 a.m. each Monday and Friday the Carmel Unified School District is presenting one in a series of school informational programs over station KRML. The complete schedule, which extends to 10 June, will be published in the Pine Cone next week.

Tomorrow's program will feature Orville Rogers, principal of Sunset School, speaking on "What is the Non-Graded Elementary School?" On the following Monday, Rod Dewar, attorney and prominent figure in the approaching override tax election, will speak on the tax and its necessity.

The new $138,690.00 Captain Cooper Elementary School, situated on a magnificent 28.51-acre site, was recently occupied by 59 proud, happy children and their three equally happy, proud and enthusiastic teachers.

Construction on the school started last July on the property, a gift from Miss Frances Molera, daughter of one of the early landowners in the Sur country, is the culmination of several years of study and planning by the Board of Trustees of the Captain Cooper School District, and the architectural firm of Burde, Shaw & Associates, Carmel.

Parents of the children and friends of the school are invited to an open house, Monday evening, 11 February, from 7:30 to 9:00 to view the new school facility.

With the occupation of the spacious buildings, the one room school has slipped from the scene in the Big Sur. Early schools in the area (the Pfeiffer School District) date back to before the turn of the century. About 1875 a school was established at the home of an early settler, Michael Pfeiffer, near the mouth of Sycamore Canyon, for the four Pfeiffer children and several others who boarded there, making a total of 11—the number required to start a school.

Not long after the first school days, a schoolhouse was built in Sycamore Canyon attended by the children of the Post, Rico and Pfeiffer families. Within a few more years, the population shifted somewhat, and W. Bernard Post, a pioneer in the Sur, gave a plot of land near his family home, and a schoolhouse was built there.

About 1910 more children of school age again lived in the Sycamore Canyon area, and later in the Pfeiffer State Park area, and the original school was again in use. Children living over three miles away rode to school on horseback, others walked.

A dozen years later, about the time the famous Highway One began construction, a school building was erected near the outdoor theater, within the park.

During a period of 10 years or more, while the highway was being constructed and re-aligned, Seaview School District was formed in the southern part of the Pfeiffer District, near Free Camp (Krenkle Korners) to serve families of construction workers. Again the schoolhouse on the Post Ranch was used. In 1943, the Seaview School was no longer needed, and the school district re-joined the Pfeiffer School District.

When the State Park was established, and became the general center of population of the area, there was a need for a school nearby for children of Park families. Thus it was that the little red schoolhouse was built on Highway One, near the State Highway maintenance yard (on State Park property), and classes have been held there continuously until last week when the new, beautiful Captain Cooper Elementary School was occupied.

Up until the time Miss Frances Molera gave her generous gift of the property for the present site, the school was known as the Pfeiffer School, or, by many, simply the Big Sur School. To quote from Big Sur's monthly newspaper, The Big Sur Roundup (February 1, 1962): "Miss Molera did not wish her name used for the new school; but was agreeable to having her grandfather's name honored in this way, as a small token of recognition by the community for this gracious gift. Captain Cooper was one of the very first landowners in this area. So that all business to do with the new school building should be carried out under the new district name, the new name was adopted before the new building was commenced. It was I (Esther Ewoldsen), born a Pfeiffer, who wrote a letter to our school board suggesting that the name 'Pfeiffer School District' be chang-

The importance of understanding God as infinite Spirit will be emphasized at Christian Science services this Sunday.

"Now the Lord is that Spirit: and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty" (II Cor. 3:17) is a Scriptural passage from the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Spirit."

From "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy this citation will also be read: "When we realize that Life is Spirit, never in nor of matter, this understanding will expand into self-completeness, finding all in God, good, and needing no other consciousness" (p. 264).

Trigger Happy

BY RICHARD BRUCE

Recently I read an article on the 44 Magnum handgun that was very intriguing. This gun is comparatively new, having been manufactured during the past six years. I never cease to be amazed at the performance of this "cannon of handguns", one of which I have in my own collection.

The author of the article had taken the 44 "Maggie", as it has become affectionately known, into Alaska to hunt the Alaskan brown bear and moose, to test its killing power on the largest game animals of the North American continent.

Personally, I would about as soon go rattlesnake hunting barefooted after dark with a beanshooter. However, the 44 Magnum came through again as the hardest hitting handgun on the American market.

The Alaskan brownie was bagged with three shots in the heart-lung cavity from a distance of seven yards. The skinned hide squared at eight feet, which is a lot of bear. The moose also took three slugs from a range of fifty-five yards. The first shot was in the neck area and the others in the lung area. This animal dressed out in the neighborhood of one thousand pounds.

This was strictly a test for this gun, and it is not suggested that any amateur try to duplicate this feat, for two good reasons: to my knowledge, it is illegal to hunt large game animals with a handgun and, secondly, unless you want to give your wife a few years of luxurious living on the proceeds of your life insurance, I would not suggest hunting bears with a handgun.

"Maggie" is a fantastic gun and is an excellent "backup" gun on any hunting trip. In the event that a rifle jams or you are treed by a wounded animal, you would still pack a lot of authority, and it's a lot easier to climb a tree with a side arm than with a rifle.

The Smith & Wesson 44 Magnum with a six-and-one-half inch barrel weighs forty-seven ounces, fires a cartridge loaded with twenty-three grains of powder and a two-hundred-forty-grain slug. It is suggested that when you try a few rounds, a good rest be used or a firm two-handed grip be adopted; then be prepared for a comfortable but hefty recoil that has a slight resemblance to being kicked by a mule.

As almost everyone knows, handguns were perfected for the convenience they afford and to be a compact weapon for the protection of the individual, of property and for the enforcement of laws. There has been much controversy as to the feasibility of arming our policing agencies with 44 Magnums. It is not done for one main reason: they pack too much power.

An officer, when forced to use his gun, wants only to stop the criminal; save his own life or the lives of innocent people. For this reason, he doesn't carry a weapon capable of shooting approximately one mile, entirely through an automobile, or one that could richochet a bullet for several blocks in a crowded city.

More next week on weapons of war and defense. In the meantime, the editor and I are going to see if we can find a gunsmith who can make a young colt out of a couple of old forty-fives.

(Editor's Note: — But first, we will find our beanshooters.)

Harpsichord

Last week Margaret Fabrizio became the proud owner of a new harpsichord which she is planning to use in her concert Sunday evening at the Carmel Art Association Gallery. For the past few years she has had the use of the Carmel Bach Festival's instrument, but has been looking for a larger one which would be more suitable for solo work. She also needed an instrument of her own which she could take on tours such as her forthcoming tour of Japan and the Orient in the spring of 1964.

Miss Fabrizio purchased the harpsichord from a University of California professor who bought it for his 15-year-old son while on a sabbatical leave in Germany. Teenagers being what they are, by the time the instrument finally arrived in Berkeley the boy was no longer interested; so they had a Vivaldi model Neupert in their home which had never been played. The harpsichord has two keyboards, four sets of strings, and is six feet, eight inches, long.

Lamberts Back From Europe

Mr. and Mrs. Jean Lambert, long time Carmelites, recently returned from a tour of England and the Continent with an interesting bit of information paralleling Carmel's fight to retain its individuality.

In the tiny village of King's Sonborne, Hants, where King John is reputed to have lived, local residents were assured by the county council that the character of their home would not be changed even though "bends in the winding road that ran through it were straightened out." And a 50-foot length of flint chalk wall demolished. The council had pointed out that records showed the wall to be only 100 years old and that it would be rebuilt of the same material to preserve its character. Sound familiar? The villagers voted 30 to 10 to accept the scheme, after a moderate British-type hassle, if the council would agree to properly restore the wall and construct a footpath alongside the road.

Jean and Helen spent some time roving from one small English village to another, visiting friends at Rotting Dean, near Brighton, and then popping over to Zurich and other European points of interest including Verona, Italy, where they were entertained by Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. Benn Marshall, who are on the colonel's duty station in Italy. Colonel Marshall is a former Army Language School student, and Jean Lambert is the locally renowned chef at the Del Monte Golf Grill.

with a view of the morning's international crisis.

And when the automatic husband emerged all pink and eager, the first thing to greet him from the breakfast plate as he opened the oven door would be (because of its lack of density) the frozen conversation of his wife in thawed and peremptory tones, saying, "All you do is sit there and read your lousy newspaper. Why don't you talk to me in the morning?"

If you really want to see something happen, Wise Men, why don't you try that?

The newspaper, of course, would have to be canned.

amount of ignition trouble."

The prescription counters at local pharmacies were rushed for anti-cough compounds. As one chap in the doctor business remarked, "This kind of thing keeps us on the telephone all of the time. You know, these breezes bring the sneezes."

EPILOGUE

During the height of the storm a customer entered Whitney's watering place, shrugged out of his damp coat and prepared himself for a drink. Just then a power failure blacked out the bar, and Carlos Brazil, the bartender, lit and distributed candles. "Hmmph," grumbled the customer, reaching for his coat, "No fun drinking by candle light, it's too 'in'. Give me the loan of a couple of candles and I'll go home and watch television."

And nothing worthwhile on which to spend it.

As the evening wore on, it became more and more evident that, whether they wanted to or not, Time and Tide might have to wait for some men. Nearly an hour was expended on the question of a four-foot cut through the crown of Third Street between Mission and Junipero, vigorously opposed by residents of the north side of the street. The Municipal Code was compelling Anthony Vasconcellos, building an inn on the south side of the street, to construct to the legal grades, and the City to give him access at such levels. The effect of such street work on the northside residences would be considerable, but, as one councilman commenced in the corridor, "They're seven years too late in complaining." The grades were established in 1954 and, he implied, that was the time to oppose them.

Councilman Frank Putnam, restive and dismayed by the creeping ennui, postponed a reading of the thirteen-page report prepared by Assistant City Clerk Arthur Plaxton regarding a massive revision of the business license ordinance. The proposal, largely technical, but containing some provisions, such as a straight and interminable one-mil tax on gross receipts, was also put over to 20 February, to allow the business people to generate some heat, and the Council to study the first comprehensive revision of the law in five years.

Somewhere along the line the Council also continued its study of operating noises at the P G & E Co. substation at Junipero and 3rd complained of by Edna Askew. Loud enough to annoy Mrs. Askew, they may help to keep everyone awake at the March meeting.

Ho hum.

Peripatetic

A modern Parnassus on wheels drifted through Carmel the other day, calling at Sam Colburn's Bookworm in passing.

An English lad named Haviland, who Sam claimed even resembled Christopher Morley's famous Roger Mifflin, is touring the country in a Volkswagen bus fitted out like a trim little bookstore. Carmel's world-wide fame brought him in for a visit, although his business as a publisher's representative takes him to colleges and universities, where he purveys fine books from New York Graphic and Phaidon Books.

Mr. Haviland has swung on south and then to the East for the Spring publishing but will return with his bookshop on wheels.
